Introduction

This report on fish farming in Iceland contains statistical information about the production in fish farming for 1988.

Included is all available information about production of salmon, trout and char in 1988 as reported by each company. All quantitative information presented in this report is provided by the managers of the various fish-farms.

The production in salmon farming is categorized as rearing of juveniles, on-growing for consumption market and salmon ranching. Smolts are by definition the end-product in the rearing of juveniles and all reared smolts i.e. included are smolts for on-growing and ocean ranching are included in the production figures unless they have been sold from the farm as pre-smolts. Salmon for the consumption market is reared in land-based tanks, in sea-cages or a combination of both and from ocean ranching. Ocean ranching is defined as the aquaculture system in which juvenile fish are released to grow on natural foods in marine waters from which they are harvested at marketable size.

The Icelandic aquaculture industry today is growing into an economically important industry. The export value of its production in 1988 amounted to more than 1.000 million Icel.kronas, which equals almost US$ 20 million. The industry employs 312 people directly and which is an increase by 28 % from 1987. The average number of employees is 3.1 per farm.

Production capacity of Icelandic fish farms

There are today 125 registered fish farms in Iceland compared to 113 in 1987 and 86 in 1986. Smolt production farms are 63 with total production capacity of about 21.5 million smolts a year and 77 on-growing farms, with total production space exceeding 450.000 cubic metres. The actual production capacity of existing fish farms in Iceland is estimated to be 7.600 metric tonnes. It has been estimated that the production capacity of on-growing sites will be over 11.000 tonnes in 1989.

Table 1. Production capacity of Icelandic fish farms.
Type of sites	Volume (m ³)	Production capacity
Rearing of juveniles	43.000	21.5 million smolts
Sea-cages	366.000	5.500 tonnes
Land-based	84.000	2.100 tonnes

There are over 26 registered salmon ranching in Iceland today. The numbers of smolts released in salmon ranching in 1988 were approximately 2 million compared to 1 million smolts released in 1987. The forecast for 1989 is that over 5 million smolts are to be released in salmon ranching in Iceland.

The return rates of salmon from ocean ranching ranged from 3-4 % in Northern Iceland to 7-15 % in Southwestern Iceland.

Production in 1988

Salmon production

The total production of juveniles for 1987 was 3.896.000 pre-smolts at 24 farms, and 9.576.000 smolts at 41 farms. Compared to 1987 there has been nearly 30 % increase in the pre-smolts production and 109 % increase in the production of smolts in 1988.

Table 2. The major statistics for production of salmon in Iceland for 1988.

Type of production	No. of sites	Production
pre-smolts	24	3.896.000
smolts	41	9.576.000
land-based	17	424 tonnes
sea-cages	15	629 tonnes
ocean-ranching	16	180 tonnes

The production of on-growing salmon for the consumption market in 1988 was 1.233 metric tonnes compared to 530 tonnes for 1987. Land-based farms produced over 424 tonnes compared to 629 tonnes from sea-cage farms. In 1988 a total of 180 metric tonnes of salmon returned to 16 ocean ranching sites.

Table 3. Production of salmon in Iceland 1985 - 1988 and forecast for 1989 - 1990.

Trout production

The production of trout in 1988 was 156 metric tonnes. Three species, brown trout, arctic char and rainbow trout are farmed in Iceland. The production of rainbow trout was 136 tonnes and 10 tonnes of both char and brown trout.

Table 4. The major statistics for production of trout in Iceland for 1988.

Type of production	Production (tonnes)
Rainbow trout	136
Brown trout	10
Arctic char	10

Production forecast for 1989/1990

Production of farmed salmon in 1989 is estimated at 4.000 tonnes and it is estimated that by 1990 Iceland will be producing some 9.000 tonnes of farmed salmon valued at US$ 50 millions.

Table 5. Production forecast for 1989 - 1990.
